Origin: His sire Alassio belongs to the top 25 stallions in Germany – his breeding index amounts to an impressive 150 points. He descends from Alabaster (National Young Dressage Horse Champion) and his dam descends from the famous Oldenburg line of Bruenane. He won the Southern German Stallion Championships, the Alpine Cup, the Black-Golden Ribbon (2x) and the Southern German Dressage Championships.

2001 and 2002 he came in 10th and 4th respectively at the finals of the National Young Horse Championships and in 2002 he performed exceptionally well at the World Championships of Young Horses by placing 5th.

Dam Chantal adds through Heraldik xx, Alexis and Cor de la Bryère highly modern performance genes to the pedigree.

Approved for Hannover, Oldenburg, Rhineland / Pfalz-Saar, Bavaria, Hessen, Saxony, Thüringen, Baden-Württemberg und Italy.

Performance Record: Not only does Alassio's Boy resemble his sire Alassio concerning type and dynamic movements, but he also follows in his footsteps as a successful athlete.

In 2005 he was crowned County Champion of Bavaria and won the 30-day performance test with flying colors in Neustadt/Dosse (8,66). So far the highlights of his career include winning the Southern German Championships in Nördlingen and even more impressive, being awarded the title Reserve Champion at the National Young Horse Championships in Warendorf in 2006. After a strong performance in the qualifiers he once again demonstrated his outstanding rideability and temperament during the finals. Both test riders rewarded him with a 9.5. In 2007 Alassio's Boy also won the Southern German Dressage Championships.

Breeding/Progeny Record: Alassio's Boy not only has impressive performance under saddle but also produces high quality foals.
